

First Monday Symposium

Honoring the Life and Work of Professor Sherry Colb

Friday, September 29, 2023 | 9:00 a.m. to 5:00 p.m. (Eastern time)

8:15 a.m. Check-in and breakfast begins | 5:00 p.m. Reception for all participants

Room TBD | Center for Law and Justice | 123 Washington Street | Newark, NJ 07102

The symposium commemorates the life of Sherry Colb and will explore the wide impact of her scholarship. A prolific and wide-ranging scholar, Professor Colb wrote chiefly in the fields of evidence, criminal law, criminal procedure, mental health law, feminist jurisprudence, and animal rights. Her writing was provocative, funny, and (at times) biting. It was always thought-provoking and accessible to lay readers as well as scholarly specialists. In both her teaching and her scholarship, Professor Colb encouraged her audience to attend to the law's moral nuances and shortcomings.

There will be four panels of distinguished faculty from Rutgers, Cornell, and around the country. The panels will focus on three areas inspired by Professor Colb's work: criminal procedure; feminist jurisprudence; and animal rights.

Co-hosted by Rutgers Law School and Cornell Law Review.
