

FUNDAMENTALS OF NEW JERSEY RESIDENTIAL LANDLORD-TENANT PRACTICE

Thursday, June 11, 2015 | 4:00 p.m. – 8:00 p.m.

Rutgers School of Law – Camden
217 North 5th Street | Camden, NJ 08102

New and seasoned practitioners alike will benefit from this overview of landlord-tenant practice in New Jersey.

Topics include:

- New Jersey's summary dispossession statutes
- Practice and procedure in landlord-tenant court, including pre- and post-trial matters
- The implied warranty of habitability
- Rental subsidy programs, including Section 8 vouchers
- Discrimination in renting
- Ethical considerations in landlord-tenant practice

This program also qualifies for New Jersey newly admitted lawyer credit for landlord-tenant practice.

Faculty:

William R. McLaughlin, Esq. has extensive experience in residential landlord-tenant issues. Before starting his own practice, Mr. McLaughlin served as managing attorney for the Federal Prisoner Reentry Clinic at Rutgers School of Law-Camden and as a staff attorney at South Jersey Legal Services.

Kathrine R. Leach, Esq. founded Leach Law, LLC in October 2013, shortly after graduating from Rutgers University School of Law. She focuses her practice mainly on small business law, and commercial and residential real estate, including landlord tenant matters. Prior to founding Leach Law, LLC, Ms. Leach was chosen to be a member of the defense team in a multi-defendant federal criminal trial, where she provided litigation support to the lead attorneys.
