

THE FUTURE OF CRYPTOASSET REGULATION

Wednesday, February 16, 2022 | 4:00 p.m. – 6:00 p.m. (EST)

Zoom webinar

This symposium will address recent regulatory developments in crypto and fintech space, and the need for further regulatory reform, and guidelines for shaping that reform. The featured speaker, Christopher Giancarlo, former chair of the Commodity Futures Trading Commission, will discuss the role of various regulatory agencies, including the CFTC and the Securities and Exchange Commission, in addressing the challenges of crypto and other financial innovations. He will also present his book "CryptoDad: The Fight for the Future of Money." The panel of practitioners will focus on an overview of regulatory developments and discuss possible regulatory and legislative initiatives in 2022. The concluding panel of law professors will discuss the SEC and its enforcement initiatives, stablecoin and central bank digital currency regulation, and crypto-exchange regulation.

Co-sponsored by Rutgers Center for Corporate Law and Governance (cclg.rutgers.edu) and Rutgers Business Law Review (rutgersbusinesslawreview.com).
